Re: Lavin v. Briefly Stated, Inc., Briefly Stated Inc. Profit-Sharing Plan,
09-Civ-8610 (CM) (FM) (S.D.N.Y.)

Dear Judge McMahon:

This office represents Plaintiff John Lavin ("Lavin"), a former employee of Defendant Briefly Stated, Inc. ("BS"), who claims in the above-referenced action that Defendant Briefly Stated Inc. Profit-Sharing Plan ("Plan") experienced a "complete discontinuance of contributions" within the meaning of the Internal Revenue Code, and therefore that he had a nonforfeitable right to all the money in his Plan account.

I write to inform the Court that on August 26, 2010, three other former BS employees filed an action asserting a "complete discontinuance of contributions" claim identical to Lavin's. A copy of the complaint in Nesbit, et al v. Briefly Stated, Inc., et al., 10-Civ-6388 (CM) (S.D.N.Y.), is enclosed.

The filing of this second suit is relevant to the issue of whether, in the instant case, the Court should deem Lavin's claim barred by the Plan's one-year statute of limitations. Lavin explained in his summary judgment papers why the one-year limitations period does not bar his claim. Lavin made the additional argument that it would serve no purpose to deem his claim time-barred because (1) the suit by the three other former BS employees (which was then anticipated, and has now been filed) would in any event require the Court to reach the merits of the “complete discontinuance” claim, and (2) if the three others prevail in their suit and the Court finds that a “complete discontinuance” occurred, the Plan would be required under the Internal Revenue Code to vest fully all Plan participants, including Lavin. See Plaintiff’s May 17, 2010 Mem. of Law in Support of his Summary Judgment Motion [Docket No. 26], at 24.
